About Maggie Oliver

Our Chair and Founder, Maggie Oliver, has dedicated her life to fighting for justice, especially for those who, without support, would not have a voice. She is a former detective who resigned from Greater Manchester Police in 2012 to expose the extent of police failings in investigating the sexual exploitation of hundreds of girls by organized gangs in Rochdale, widely known as the “Rochdale Grooming Scandal”. She interviewed many victims providing harrowing details of systematic abuse, yet witnessed allegations not recorded by senior officers, perpetrators not pursued, nor victims protected.

After striving to pursue this internally, she chose conscience over career and has dedicated herself to supporting victims of sexual abuse and exploitation, and to ensuring our criminal justice system is fit for purpose in achieving the justice they deserve. This led to her working for four years as Programme Consultant on the multi award-winning dramatisation of the case entitled Three Girls (BBC One) which brought some of the issues to public attention for the first time. Maggie was also a key contributor for The Betrayed Girls documentary (BBC One).

In 2019, she founded charity The Maggie Oliver Foundation, and continues to grow her army fighting for survivors and justice.

Maggie continues to be a regular contributor to national media outlets on the subject of child sexual abuse and exploitation and failings of the police and other statutory services.
