

CONFIDENTIALITY STATEMENT

We completely understand that talking about things which have happened in the past might be really difficult, and the things you do talk us about could be very private, and you might not have shared such details with anyone else. That is why we take confidentiality and your privacy very seriously, and most of the time, whatever you tell us will stay between us.

However, there are times where we might need to share with other people what you have shared with the Foundation. This may be if:

- The Foundation is required to do so in response to a court order.
- You ask us to share the information with someone else.
- We believe that you, or another person, is at high risk of significant harm.
- We think you might be in immediate danger of being hurt by someone else.
- You've told us that a child is in danger
